

This conference gathers scholars engaged in research on Greek hymns found in the earliest extant sources of all Eastern liturgical rites. The scope of inquiry includes not only hymns that may be regarded as part of the (pre-) history of the received Byzantine rite but also those composed in Greek for non-Byzantine traditions.

Papers will consider hymns that did not withstand medieval processes of ritual hybridisation and standardisation, and those thought to have been composed in Greek but preserved only in ancient translations (e.g. Georgian, Syriac, Armenian). A diversity of methodological approaches will be represented, showcasing both original philological and palaeographical research and innovative literary and cultural-historical analysis.
